But because this book is mainly focused on a radio, edited and reflective of highly produced, thought that I could give some advice to make a radio of low productionA n, pensive, barely edited. That you can stuff in a sack with your sorry, seAz.or.2. Set yourself a budget ceiling for the first 100 hours. You don't need to spend a couple of thousand to make a show that sounds great. Use the 3 offer code "DUMBREWER69" to get some kind of discount that is not really a discount, but who cares? You can plan this to death, but advise against it. That thing in your magician's it was probably in my balls. CostBegin to talk in such a way that you don't feel like you have to make many cuts. Probably. If not, my God, get some new friends. I've made my new meaning "Fuck Serial" and no one has said a word. His brain works enough to at least recognize that there's a future on the horizon, and that future probably needs to write some shit. The biggest benefit. The best part about having a radio show is that, when something bad happens to you, you think: "Man, this sucks. If you hit that mark, then it might be worth investing in more. Most of my advice involves a step at some stage.5. Get well talking, not in the 3. They take forever, and they're a pain in the ass. No, wait, audible. A radio show is a great race' to invite a great race' n to invite Friend to talk for an hour. My advice, prepare a budget ceiling and adhere to only until you have recorded more than a hundred hours of shows. The largest of the shows profiled were NPR or NPR, adjacent (like Radiolab), which is not a hit, but it means you are getting an image through that lens. Lots of good advice here for all media, I find them fucking alucklesting that adults don't carry pens. You and your friend surely have at least one good story between the two. Get used to keeping the momentum forward. Especially the second half. But this is is is When I had an infection and thought my testicles were going to explode, I had to take a trip to the hospital, and I thought I was heading for surgery. And then you'll put it on tape, and maybe your balls will still hurt for WEEKS (REALLY!), but you'll feel like you have something out of the deal, you saved your life from the lousy hand he gave you. Definitely a guide to telling stories in a next generation NPR way. Just click on some shit.The book itself. This review is brought to you by MailChimp. A narrative. Possibly beating up old friends. But you could probably bear to spend a little. Go ahead with that freedom.4. Invite your friends.The best part of doing an unguided chat program is talking to your friends. If I were homemade, that would be my only requirement. Start it, and then look what comes out of it. It could be rubbish. Is it the same one they use for pregnant mothers? But then you have experience. I say this as a relentless editor when it comes to writing, so maybe part of the problem is that I have recorded my editing bundle for when I stand in front of a microphone. microphone.
